Substance reference telegram given Foreign Minister Erkin this morning together with impressions gleaned in my Washington discussions regarding importance which we attach to maximizing Nassau break through. In so presenting, I emphasized importance in Turkey's getting in on ground floor of this significant move toward a stronger NATO, in addition to specific advantage of substitution of Polaris deterrent for Jupiters.

Erkin asked number of questions for purposes clarification and then said greatly appreciated spirit of co-operation in which matter being raised. He said would take up with Prime Minister and Cabinet in consultation with Turkish military and would give GOT reaction as soon as possible.

Implying that he personally was impressed by the reasonableness of our proposal, Erkin said that problem which he especially foresaw would be that of convincing Turkish public that Polaris would be as effective as Jupiters in assuring security of Turkey. Fact that Jupiters are actually on Turkish soil gives ordinary Turkish feeling of confidence which would be difficult maintain by Polaris.

I observed it was for this reason that we had proposed visits to Turkish ports but perhaps most effective public relations gambit would be to emphasize that removal Jupiters was part of larger move for strengthening NATO deterrent and that prospective Italian agreement could also be helpful.

Erkin agreed that problem would be essentially one of public relations but nevertheless of no mean proportions. When I questioned this by noting effort which GOT had made to restrict publicity on existence Jupiters in Turkey, Erkin smiled and said: "Everyone knew about them but didn't say much. Now they will begin talking."
